Hi Elizabeth:

I wanted to follow up with you on the North Pole Refinery contaminated site (owned and operated by Flint Hills Resources). When we talked last month, I agreed to get back to you with some additional information in response to your questions. I'm ready to discuss whenever you are.

One thing I promised you was a copy of a sample Compliance Order by Consent entered into by the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation. I've attached a recent sample involving diesel fuel contamination, which is treated as a hazardous substance under Alaska's statutes.

Also, I've had a chance to confer further with my client, ADEC. They indicated they had been in touch with someone else at EPA recently (I think the name was Brandon—sorry, I didn't get a last name).

ADEC hasn't yet sent an official letter requesting EPA's deferral, and I believe they would like a further chance to discuss details of that option (and any alternatives) with EPA before making a final decision on it. So this is not on a fast track. However, I did want to get back to you, so whenever you are ready, please just drop me an email or call and we can discuss.

Thanks.

Hi Elizabeth:

I should have some answers for you on your questions relating to the North Pole Refinery in Alaska by Friday (tomorrow). Could we schedule a time to talk, if you are in the office that day? I'm open at any time after 9:30 AK time (which would be 10:30 am your time).

If that doesn't work for you, is Monday a possibility?

Thanks, and I will forward to speaking with you.
